Excessive Alcoholism And Exposure Given As Cause Of Death

A coroner's jury in Mayfield yesterday ruled that Rudy Edwards, 27-year-old Kirksey man, died of "excessive alcoholism," and exposure.

Edwards was found to be dead when he was taken to the Full-or-Morgan Hospital Sunday by Virgil Darnell of Wingo and Hugh Adams of Farmington, his two companions.

The two men told Sheriff Walter Spillman that Edwards was in a stupor and they could not awaken him so they took him to the hospital. He was pronounced dead on arrival.

The coroner's jury reported that Darnell and Adams admitted the trio had consumed a large amount of whiskey during Saturday night and had driven over Graves County during the early morning hours Sunday morning.

According to their story the drinking had ended at the home of a Negro bootlegger in Mayfield. They said Edwards drank a quantity of whiskey at the home and passed out. He was placed in the back seat of the car, they said, and the trio then drove about the county. Edwards was clad in a T-shirt, and the temperature dropped down to almost zero during the night.

The trip to the hospital was made when Edwards could not be aroused.

The funeral was held at 2:00 this afternoon at the Locust Grove Nazarene Church with Bro. Saunders officiating. Burial will be in the Kirksey cemetery.

The Linn Funeral Home is in charge.

Sixteen Year Old Admits Killing Five

By CLARENCE RAYLINGS
United Press International
EL CAJON, Calif. (UPI) — A lanky 16-year-old runaway youth tearfully admitted Monday night that he killed the wife and four children of his benefactor because one of the children "wouldn't stop screaming." The youth was captured by an off-duty policeman.

"I guess I just flipped my lid," 6-foot, 4-inch Earl Eder told police.

"I pray that God will take mercy on him," grieving Thomas Pendergast, 39, husband and father of the victims said.

"Why did you do it? Why? Why?" Pendergast asked Eder, a runaway from Irondequoit, N. Y., at the police station.

Surrendered Peaceably
Eder was captured Monday night after a civil engineer told an off-duty police officer of seeing him in San Diego, about 12 miles from the scene of the killings. The officer arrested the youth who surrendered peaceably.

"I did because Diane 4 years old, one of the slain children was screaming. She wouldn't stop screaming. That started the whole thing," he said.

Pendergast, an aircraft plant worker, and a deeply religious man who had taken Eder into his home six weeks ago to "help save the boy's soul," found his wife, Lois, 37, fatally shot in their home here Friday.

Happy Over Capture
In various rooms throughout the house and adjoining passage, Pendergast found his four children, 6, and David, 4, all with their throats slashed.

The two oldest boys also were dismembered.

"I'm glad I'm captured," Eder said. "I am happy to get someone where where it's warm and to get food."

The youth, who was booked on suspicion of murder and jailed after questioning by police, said he had been living for the past three days in a deserted ballroom in the San Diego Mission Beach area.

Gasoline Barge Explodes, Burns

BACO, Wash. (UPI) — Firemen this morning brought under control a blistering fire caused when a barge loaded with gasoline exploded and burned at the port of Pasco.

The barge, City of Longview No. 535, had unloaded about half of its 300,000 gallon cargo when the explosion occurred. Cause of the explosion was not known.

The force of the blast ripped away most of the dock and tossed Walter Tittle, 29, Kennelwick, Wash., into the Columbia River. He was rescued by his father and taken to Our Lady of Lourdes Hospital here where his condition was reported as fair.

Flames from the burning barge leaped 200 feet into the air and threatened for a time 16 huge storage tanks on the banks of the river.

Paint on the tanks, which contained about two-million gallons of petroleum products, blistered as firemen kept them drenched with water.

The blast shattered windows a mile away and hurled a portion of the barge's superstructure 75 feet.

Firemen from here and nearby Kenton, W. Va., doused the blaze until the barge eventually sank in the Columbia River.

Residents Not Dreaming Of White Holiday

By ANDREW PURCELL
United Press International
OSWEGO, N.Y. (UPI) — No one here is dreaming of a white Christmas.

With nearly a season's worth of snow already on the ground all the melodic sentimentality in the world would have a hard time getting anyone to wish for any more. The 85-inches of snow began falling on Dec. 7.

For a while it brought normal life to a standstill in this northern New York community. And although normalcy is slowing returning it will be a long time before any one will forget this particular December 7 and its aftermath.

The snow, piled into huge drifts by winds and packed into solid walls 15 feet high by plows, brought hardship and some danger to the 23,000 residents of this community at the southernmost bend of Lake Ontario. But no real crisis developed.

Little Car Travel
Despite the tons of snow which fell between Sunday and Thursday, all but the sick or elderly managed to get in and out of their homes with little trouble. Food and supplies were available. It was just a little more difficult than usual to get them.

Until the end of the week, for example, there was virtually no passenger car travel. But anyone who wanted food could get it by trudging waist-deep through the snow to the city's main business area.

Police, Red Cross and civil defense personnel were kept busy bringing supplies to people who could not get out for them. While many neighborhood grocery stores had to close because of a lack of deliveries, supermarkets in the downtown section operated as usual.

Tavern-Business Good
A tavern-owner reported that at the height of the snow-storm, "business was twice as good as any warm summer day." He attributed his good fortune to the fact that this was one of the few establishments in the area which kept a path open through the street, where pedestrians found it easier going than on the walks to his door.

Although many industries were shut down, along with all schools in the city, the snow provided work for many. Police and firemen were kept busy directing emergency service for 18 to 20 hours a day. And the regional unemployment office channeled jobless workers to snow shoveling chores at $2 an hour.

Below normal temperatures were expected to prevail west of the Continental Divide, it said. "In the intervening area of the central plains about normal averages are in prospect but with large variations."

The bureau said the amount of rain and snow would be equal to or above normal east of the Appalachians, along the Gulf coast, and over the eastern Great Lakes, with snow likely in central and northern portions of these areas.

It said rainfall and snow also was likely to exceed normal amounts in the Pacific Northwest and in the central and northern plains. In the rest of the country, it said, rain and snow should be below normal amounts.

Lynn Grove PTA To Hold Party

Every family is asked to be responsible for a sack of candy or fruit and all members are urged to attend.

R 'N' R RESTORES HEARING
SUTTON, England (UPI) — Metal worker William Gregory today credited an Elvis Presley rock 'n' roll song for restoring his hearing. Gregory, deaf for eight years, said "something went click" while the song was blaring on the radio during the weekend.

His hearing suddenly returned.

Varsity Announces Christmas Programs

Bob Craven, manager of the Varsity theatre, announced today that the move goes of Murray and Calloway County are in for a double treat this year.

This year, as in the past, there will be a free show at the Varsity for all the children. This will be presented on Saturday, December 20th, at 9:00 a. m., in appreciation of the children's patronage during the past year.

The program lineup for the show will be a Randolph Scott western, "Ten Wanted Men", and cartoons to complete the attractions for all who attend. The management and staff of the Varsity have donated their services for this performance, and they sincerely hope that the parents will make arrangements for the children to attend.

The second treat in store this Christmas season will be the second annual merchant's theatre party, which will be held during the Theatre's regular hours on Christmas eve December 24th. This show is made possible by the participating merchants of Murray. A list of these merchants can be found elsewhere in today's paper. Just go to one of the listed merchants and pick up your free ticket. Which may be used anytime on Christmas Eve. ONCEOVER
HOLLYWOOD — (UPI) — In a scene from the movie "They Came to Cordura," Gary Cooper was supposed to meet Rita Hayworth for the first time and give her a head-to-toe ogling.

"How did I do?" Cooper asked Rita afterward.

"Perfect," she said. "I felt like a smuggler's trunk being examined by a suspicious customs inspector."

Stubblefield went on to defeat James Bandy, Greenville Republican, in the Nov. 4 general election.

Gregory, who filed suit contesting the primary election, because of alleged fraudulent voting, had the suit dismissed by the Kentucky Court of Appeals in September. The appellate court said he should have listed the names of the alleged fraudulent voters.

Gregory later complained to the House committee, headed by Rep. Clifford Davis (D-Tenn.), that Stubblefield's victory was obtained through fraudulent voting in Logan County, Kentucky.

In his original suit filed in Calloway Circuit Court in Kentucky he had claimed that fraudulent voting occurred in Calloway, Logan and Marshall counties.

The Murray Planning Commission met last night at 6:00 to prepare the final draft of the Zoning Ordinance.

Most objections have been eliminated from the ordinance which would cause undue hardship on certain residents.

Last night another change was made in the ordinance which would change the business area from Riley Grocery to the Whitehouse Grocery to a B-2 area.

With all these changes in the original ordinance, practically all objections are thought to have been eliminated, and it is expected to be accepted by the city council.

A pre-briefing of the ordinance is to be set up with the Planning Commission and the City Council present in order to iron out any misunderstanding and to clarify the ordinance.

All members of the commission were present last night with Verne O. Kyle the chairman, presiding.

Dr. Harry U. Wayne was named as vice-chairman of the group.

Members of the commission are Verne Kyle, Holmes Ellis, Dr. Wayne, Frank Lancaster, 21 Settle, Audrey Simmons and Jack Bryan.

Funeral Of Miss Bell Enoch Monday

Miss Bell Enoch, age 85, passed away on Sunday at 9:30 p.m. after an illness of two years.

Complications were given as the cause of death which came at the Murray Hospital.

Survivors include three sisters, Mrs. Michael Cole of Murray, Mrs. Anna Jones of Lynn Grove and Mrs. Arthur Todd of Lynn Grove; three brothers, Will, Wade and Joe Enoch all of Paris.

She was a member of the Mt. Pleasant Cumberland Presbyterian church. The funeral was held at the Max H. Churchill Funeral Home yesterday at 1:00 p.m. with Bro. Davis Brown, Jr. officiating. Burial was in the Lassiter Cemetery.

The Redbirds of Coach Gene Calley are paired off with the Ballard Memorial Bombers and will play at 3:30 in the opening round on Monday. The Bombers have a 5-2 record for the season. Their last two wins were over the Heath Pirates and the Clinton Central Red Devils last week.

New Concord has an enviable 8-1 posting for the season. Their lone defeat was at the hands of a strong David Lipscomb quintet in Nashville. Should the Redbirds be victorious over the Ballard quintet, the Calloway squad would meet either Fulton or

Knights Roll Up Sixth Win

The Murray Knights rolled up a whopping score in recording their sixth consecutive win to continue their undisputed reign of the Atomic Valley Independent League. The Knights re-imposed over the welcome mat of a Bardwell five 128-110.

Although the contest was close all the way as the home-shaking Bardwell club never let up in their efforts to trip the league leaders, Murray was on top at the end of every quarter stop.

The Knights pushed into a 34-26 first period advantage but was outscored by two points in the second stanza to hold a 64-58 lead at halftime.

Green and Tabors paired the Murray scoring attack with 29 points each. Newton tallied 24 markers and Graham scored 17 points.

The Knights will be host to the Princeton Adams in the Carr Health Building on December 29th.

Knights Scoring
Green 29, Tabors 29, Newton 24, Graham 17, Holmes 10, McKee 11, Huss 8.

Murray State Slaps Union University With Lop-Sided 95-48 Defeat For Third MSC Win

The Murray State Thoroughbreds romped over Union University 95-48 Monday night in the MSC sports arena. It was the third win against two losses for the Threds.

Ken Peterson sank a long hook to break a 5-5 tie and to lead the Racers off on an offensive charge that left stunned Union hopelessly dangling on the short end of a lop-sided score. The Racers were held scoreless for six minutes as Murray ran the count to 23-5. Murray State kept forging ahead on the net switching antics of Terry Darnall.

Coach Cal Calloway began to substitute freely late in the period and a completely new line-up was in action for the Racers before halftime. Murray held the upper hand 48-19 at halftime.

points. Dale Alexander picked up 13 and Robert Giombetti flipped in H. Moore and Maddox led Union with 15 each. Keith Chilcutt from Buchanan, Tennessee did not score for Union. Jerald Hill from Paris picked up 4 points.

Mike O'Riordan suffered a hand injury that may sideline him from 8 to 8 weeks, reports indicated today. O'Riordan is a key man in the Racers defense and rebounding department.

Murray State scored on 37 shots from the field as compared to only 17 for the visitors. The Racers hit 21 of 31 free throw attempts for 67 per cent. Union pushed in 14 of 18 charity tosses for 78 per cent. The Racers were charged with 15 personal fouls and Union committed 22 fouls. The Thoroughbreds will be host to the University of Mississippi Saturday night. The Rebels edged Murray 67-61 in a game at Oxford on December 8th. Murray has a season posting of 3-2.

Your Child's Health

Every conscientious parent is obligated to care for his child's health. Because it is seldom that children are subjected to so-called nervous diseases, it doesn't enter the mind of the parent to employ the Chiropractor in cases where children are ill. As a matter of fact, children respond more readily than adults to Chiropractic care, and that response is not limited to those diseases wherein there is a spinal curvature, or some other chronic condition which is generally associated with abnormalities in the spine.

Chiropractic is just as effective in cases of indigestion, constipation, diarrhea, fever, colds, coughs, and the various acute diseases to which children are subject. The Chiropractor realizes that a child will be healthy only when they are free of nerve interference caused by spinal misalignments.

There's Lots New About Gift Wraps

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — (UPI) — Coordinated styling is the latest word this year in Christmas gift wraps, as well as in fashions. The most striking packages will blend contrasting, rather than matching, colors in their yuletide outfits of smartly signed gift papers and ribbons, according to Kaye King, gift wrapping stylist for Hallmark Cards.

Perhaps the most eye-catching of all the styling touches is a new series of "sparkling" gift wraps. Miss King said. Trees, winter vistas and geometric designs are executed in glittering silver against backgrounds of contrasting color.

Another distinctive paper portrays the celebrated mistletoe, in stencil-like tones of soft green and pink in one of several new designing techniques introduced this year.

The warmth and informality of a water color painting has been used to interpret a rural scene symbolic of the Christmas celebrations of old, according to the stylist.

Foil papers lend a rich, often luminous flavor to other designs. Bronzed foils, as well as papers in other metallic shades, stand out among the stylish new offerings.

The familiar Pennsylvania Dutch mode of artwork has been used on several new gift papers, including one that portrays Christmas ornaments in outlines of broken gold against a red background.

New and light-hearted is a pattern of star-shaped Santa Clauses, whose hands are joined in friendly array.

Several interesting gift papers have been reproduced from full-color photographs. One portrays Christmas trees and Santas smartly formed of paper sculpture and lavishly decorated with gold lace.

Broadway

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK — (UPI) — "Hamlet" has a profound influence not only on actors and directors, but also on authors. Playwright Elmer Rice is the latest to fall under its spell.

As his 29th play in a 44-year career as a dramatist, Rice has turned out "One for Passion," presented at Henry Miller's Theater by the Playwrights' Company and Franchot Thomas. It is a modern paraphrase of "Hamlet" with an ending that gives Rice's explanation of the hero's troubles in specific Freudian terms.

This is an effort that doesn't quite come off as thoroughly satisfactory theater, although it certainly is Rice's best work in several years and is a plausible and competent job. The trouble is that it begins to grow a trifle tedious about halfway through, and that the solution, which might have been expected to give the final part a lift, has been telegraphed well ahead.

Rice's Hamlet is a restless young man of wealthy family in California. Two years before he begins, he had suddenly quit his senior year in college and set off to tour the world. He didn't keep in touch with his parents, but ward finally reached him of the accidental death of his father.

Six months after that, he turns up to find his mother married to an old friend of the family who practically ran the father's many business interests. The son gets suspicious at once and begins to probe the circumstances of his father's death.

There is, of course, an Ophelia, a Laertes and a Polonius, and it is interesting to watch the direct parallels with many of Shakespeare's scenes. However, no one gets killed, and the explanation is that the son really hated his father because of his own disastrous affection for his mother. The solution is for son and mother to part forever.

John Kerr and Diana Wynyard are quite good as son and mother for the most part, although I could wish for a little more restraint by Kerr in a couple of spots. Lloyd Gough, Anne Revere, Russell Gaike, Robert Lansing and Joanna Brown are able assistants.

That delightful New York City Ballet has begun the second section of its 10th anniversary season at the City Center with several new works mixed in with their generally commendable standards.

The American premiere of "Medea," created by the Swedish ballerina Birgit Cullberg to the music of Bela Bartok, was given an exciting interpretation by Melissa Hayden, Jacques d'Amboise and the others. It becomes a valuable asset of the repertoire.

Other new works scattered through the engagement are William Christensen's "Odetta" with Stravinsky score, the Balanchine-Well-Brecht "The Seven Deadly Sins" and Balanchine's "Minuet" with Puccini music.

The engagement extends through Feb. 1, beginning with What's New!

NEW YORK — (UPI) — New this year in Christmas home decoration:

An accordion — like window screen of small foil, with sparkling ornaments adorning its cut-out sections.

A stylized angel figurine of sculptured paper. The angel's robe is of foil, trimmed in gold.

A Nativty scene, intricately detailed and richly colored, that is ideal as a mantel decoration.

A Santa Claus centerpiece, with a gaily smiling angel astride a rocking horse. "Wander," matching "Nativty" scene, placed around other party accessories are available.

CHAPTER 27
I LOVED my sister, William Willis said. "But I've got to think of myself, too. If Juliet is dead, and then if anything would happen to Lois—"

"You'd be able to buy a lot of birds," Bingo Riggs said. He counted to ten and said, "Where is your sister now?"

The look on William Willis' face simply said that he was not going to answer that.

Bingo felt a rush of sympathy for their visitor. "Mr. Willis," he said warmly, "I'm beginning to think we'll all get a little further if we're friends." He looked at the man who had so obviously been up all night, who must have been through a bad few years.

He was glad to see Handsome Kusan, bring some warm-up coffee cake along with a pot of coffee.

The smile he gave William Willis came from his heart. "You were prowling around what may be our house. We don't want care, and I speak for my partner as well as myself. He felt the smile widening. "Maybe it would tell us why you were trying to get in the house, and what you were looking for, we could help you find it."

William Willis looked up at him with anguished eyes.

Handsome brought some butter to put on the coffee cake and said, apologetically, "I wish we had some jam. Or some eggs." He set the butter on the coffee table, produced a handful of paper napkins, and said, "It's nice to have you as our guest."

"Drink your coffee Mr. Willis," said Bingo, "and then let's us all go looking for what you came here to find."

"I don't know what I'm looking for. Believe me, I'm telling the truth. It just seems to me that there must be something—"

He paused. "I don't know what I expected to find, or where I expected to find it. Believe me, it was just that I wanted to search the house by myself."

Bingo said gently, "The police have done everything but tear down the walls and search."

William Willis said, "I loved my sister very much." He lifted his head and suddenly he didn't look quite as tired, quite as defeated. "She was beautiful. She could have gone a long way in show business. If she hadn't married that horrible, really horrible man for his money. She did, and it was a terrible mistake." He sighed himself softly and said, "Look, I can't possibly tell you all about it right now. Only wasn't just because of Juliet Lattimer's money. She was very frail, very delicate, her heart wasn't good. This Juliet Lattimer offered her what seemed to be a snug harbor, a secure refuge. She didn't realize—"

He paused, on his lip, and said, "She was an artist, a real artist. She did a slack wire act. He was beautiful, he was looked into faraway and unseen places, as though he were seeing his little sister perform on the stage.

"Mr. Willis," Bingo said deprecatingly, "I'm what you might call a fan of wire acts, and I don't remember any Lois Willis."

William Willis looked at him wearily and said, "Her name wasn't Willis. I thought I told you, she was my stepister. Her name was Lois DeLee."

There was a little silence, and then the doorbell rang with a grumpy authoritative sound.

It was Detectives Perroni and Henderson. They looked as though they'd been awake all night, too.

Perroni flashed his hard and professional smile and said, "Well, you're up and dressed early this morning." He looked at William Willis and said, "What are you doing here?"

William Willis looked nervous. "We're businessmen," Bingo said indignantly. "Mr. Willis trains birds and rents out reptiles. We're just talking over some future deals. Why he should covet up for William Willis, he didn't know, but it seemed to be the thing to do at the time."

"We brought you a little news," Henderson said. "That's why we're here so early. About Chester Baxter."

"He's dead," Perroni said, making it obvious that he didn't like to waste time.

"Found in an alley in Ocean Park, with his throat cut," Henderson said.

"And," Perroni added grimly, "where were you boys all last night, and can you prove it?"

Bingo didn't answer. He sank down on the davenport and whispered, "The poor little guy!"

"Well," Perroni said, "So he was a friend of yours?"

Bingo didn't answer that, either. He was thinking of Chester Baxter again, with a gleam in his eye and high hopes in his heart. He had been a man of honor, in his profession and according to his lights, and someone had cut his throat.

Bingo didn't want to talk to Perroni, he didn't want to talk to anyone. He just wanted to get away by himself and think things over. To his relief, Perroni turned his morose gaze on William Willis.

"All right, Willis, what are you doing here? Looking for your sister? We'll find her first."

she is entirely innocent. There is no reason to think she is guilty. Her name is William Willis.

Even Perroni was not back on his feet for a moment or so. "All right, Mr. Willis," the said-eyed detective said, "did you know Chester Baxter?"

"I never heard of a Chester Baxter," the look on his face dared Perroni, of anyone else, to prove otherwise.

"And if I may be so rude as to ask," Perroni said, "where were you last night and what were you doing?"

William Willis stared returned icily for ice. "I was in Bakerfield until one o'clock," he said. "With my birds. Doing a routine performance for a homeless dog shelter."

Perroni nodded to Henderson. "Check," he said. Henderson went into the kitchen to telephone.

"Handsome," Bingo said, in a voice he hoped sounded bored, "call up our lawyer, Mr. Arthur Schuler. Tell him there's a couple of cops bothering us for nothing."

Perroni held up a hand and said, "Any time you are going to need a lawyer, I'll let you know. Right now, this is only a routine investigation. Me, I don't care about this Chester Baxter character being murdered. My particular job is arresting Lois Henderson for the murder of her husband."

"Lois didn't kill him," William Willis said.

"And besides," Bingo said, "he can't possibly be dead."

Henderson eased himself into the room and said quietly, "I checks, Perroni. This guy's bird set did a show last night in Bakerfield, the dog shelter benefit. Drew a big crowd and went over great."

He acknowledged William Willis' thanks with a nod and a smile and said, "He didn't get away from Bakerfield until almost one o'clock, so he couldn't have gotten back here in time to cut Chester Baxter's throat."

Perroni looked coldly at William Willis and said, "All right. Go home."

William Willis lit a new cigarette and didn't move.

"Stay here, then," Perroni said. He turned to Bingo and Handsome. "And where were you last night?"

"We weren't out murdering Chester Baxter," Bingo said. "We were here."
